Lines in the Snow by Rolf Schmidt

Yesterday morning, Malcolm McLeod lived in a fine house, drove a sleek sports car, and had a pretty girlfriend. It troubled his conscience not at all that his job was designing less-than-genuine websites. But now he's been locked in his garage with the car motor running, his house is going up in flames, his bank accounts are frozen, and faceless dark-suited men are after him. Suddenly he and Amanda are running for their lives—alone and captive on a driverless train hurtling down a railroad surrounded by terrorists, rioters, MI-5 agents, and hapless innocents just trying to get home for Christmas in what looks to be the storm of the century.

And what's worse, Malcolm isn't really a railway engineer—he's just being talked through the process by a real one—and then there's the matter of the radioactive cargo....

Fantasy

The Legend of Harmony Grove by Michael Lawrence Vincent

Becky Cliver seemed an ordinary enough teenager, her time occupied with school and her thoughts with boys. But unusual dreams and visions plagued her, and she felt that some mysterious power slumbered within her. Then the beautiful and cruel Alexandra Ubil rode into Harmony Grove, and Becky's power began to wake. Soon Becky would find herself at the heart of a terrible struggle between the forces of light and darkness that threatens to consume all, with nothing for weapons but her own nascent gifts and the mind of a young man trapped in a useless body.

Mystery

The Fibonacci Murders by Dale E. Lehman Howard County Mysteries Seires

"I start with zero. Nobody dies today." The strange note delivered to Lieutenant Detective Rick Peller of the Howard County, Maryland, police was just the beginning. Soon Peller and his colleagues find themselves chasing a cunning killer who is basing his crimes on the Fibonacci series, a mathematical sequence in which each number is the sum of the preceding two. And the only thing Peller knows for sure is that the series never ends.
